Kinzelman Art Consulting Announces
New Office Relocation and Newly Designed Website

KINZELMAN ART CONSULTING, 3907 Main Street, Houston, Texas 77002

HOUSTON, TX (5 October 2012) – After eight years in their current office at 3909 Main Street located in the historic Isabella Court building, Kinzelman Art moves next door into 3907 expanding their office space. “This move is a welcome change and increase of much needed space. I am enthusiastic to enter our thirteenth year of business in a newly designed office,” says Julie Kinzelman. “Additionally, we are launching a fresh, new website to coincide with our relocation.”

Kinzelman Art has retained Houston architect John Blackmon to design their new office space. In addition to Kinzelman’s current facilities at 3909, John's previous projects include neighboring Inman Gallery, the Whitten Proctor Fine Art Conservation Studio in the Heights and residential work throughout the state. “My goal in designing the new Kinzelman Art space was to provide the private offices with access to as much daylight as possible while carving out shared spaces that offer opportunity for interactions ranging from the ‘tête-à-tête’ to a meeting with clients and the entire staff.”

Kinzelman Art Consulting is proud to be a supporting partner for the second year in a row for the TX Contemporary Art Fair that will take place October 18th-21st, 2012.

Founded in 2000, Kinzelman Art Consulting provides full-scale art advisory and collections management services to private collectors and corporations. They specialize in all aspects of art procurement, collections management, fine art appraisal services, exhibition planning and installation design.
